

DIED,

On Saturday morning last, at the residence of Governor Johnson, near Thibodauxville, Miss LOUISA E. KEY, daughter, of the late Philip B. Key, of Georgetown, D. C. after an illness of five days. Her family—her friends—and society, have all sustained a severe loss by the unexpected death of this young and accomplished woman — N. Orleans Mes Ads Mar 19

In this town on Sunday last, Mrs. JANE BYRD PAGE, the amiable wife of JOHN W. PAGE, Esq. after a lingering illness, the pain of which was lessened by her unshaken confidence in her Saviour and a cheerful acquiescence in his will. By this melancholy bereavement, her husband and ten children are deprived of an affectionate companion and devoted mother — Winchester Republican April 2.

At Alexandria, on Wednesday last, in the 75th year of his age, JOHN LONGDEN, one of the oldest and most esteemed of the citizens of that place. Few men have passed through a long life, so blameless as did John Longden. He was a true man—a good citizen—and a most kind relative. In all these relations he supported a character which gained him the respect of his fellow citizens, and the love of his surviving friends and family. He was a soldier of the Revolutionary war, and served his country honorably and faithfully during many years of her extreme hardships and privations. To the many excellent qualities of his heart was added a strong and correct judgment. His opinions were always worthy of attention. It is not pretended to write his eulogy; no one who knows him requires this. If solid virtue, uncorrupted honesty, uprightness of character, and unpretending merit, are worthy of remembrance, then will his name be but soon forgotten — Alex. Gazette
