

The New Orleans Times

NEW ORLEANS, FRIDAY, NOV. 5, 1886.

All Saints' Day in New Orleans.

The Customs of the Day Observed and the Dead Revered.

Prayers Recited and Objects of Interest

Printed in each Cemetery in the City.

All Saints' Day dawned upon the city with a clear, bright and breezy atmosphere to welcome it to its struggle against the regularity of the season...

thinking that his memory was garlanded with the brightest of living flowers in the hearts of those who loved him...

The St. Vincent de Paul cemetery, situated on Louis street, Third District, was constantly thronged to the gates of the cemetery...

In a place not far from the main walk that in the "tormented" ones each side seems like a wall of the cemetery...

The tombs of the dead and marble attract attention on all sides, and nearly all receive the same treatment...

On the family tomb of David McCane we find the words "The dead are not forgotten..."

It is a common sight to see the tombs of the dead in the cemetery...
